Last August's dig at Cookham uncovered exciting evidence of an early medieval monastic settlement previously only known from a brief historical record.

Dr Thomas, who led the excavation, will unveil the detailed analysis and interpretation of the site and material finds. He will also discuss plans for further investigations, including three years of wide-area excavation as well as work on other areas in Cookham, geophysical surveys, back-garden test-pitting and scientific analysis.

Funds need to be raised for this programme and so this talk is priced to make a contribution.
